Autonomic Response Testing (ART)

ART is a highly sensitive and accurate form of bio-feedback testing. This non-invasive muscle testing system asks the body what it needs at the time to bring it back to balance. It is a system of evaluation and treatment developed by Dietrich Klinghardt, M.D. Ph.D, and Louisa Williams, DC ND and marries together techniques from many disciplines including Applied Kinesiology and biophoton physics.

Why would I benefit from incorporating this method into my practice?

Using ART, it is possible to see beyond your patient's symptoms to uncover the root causal issues of their health concerns and therefore help them achieve deeper and more permanent resolution of the issues.

Dr. Klinghardt believes that many practitioners using kinesiology or muscle testing in their practice are often getting inaccurate information because the autonomic nervous system is not functioning properly. In ART, this condition is called blocked regulation and refers to the inability of the ANS to self-regulate and it is caused by 7 common factors:

- Toxins
- Nutritional deficiencies/biochemical imbalances
- Structural issues
- Energetic perturbances
- Food intolerances
- Electromagnetic and Geopathic stress
- Unresolved Psycho-emotional issues

Over the course of the 2 day training in ART 1, you will learn how to accurately assess your patients/family/friends for the half of the above factors and devise a safe, appropriate and effect protocol to address these causal issues. The other factors are taught in ART II, the second level of training.
